

Q17 A candidate new to ministry often brings enthusiasm and a fresh perspective. At this point in a career a minister's energy is high and all the experiences of seminary and an internship bring new ideas and an awareness of what is going on in the denomination as a whole. We could capture this enthusiasm and energy in our hopes for growth. How likely is it that you would look forward to a mutual experience of growth and connection with a minister who doesn't bring us years of experience but who is otherwise a good match for us?
